The American Collegiate Rowing Association was founded in the spring of 2008 through the hard work of club rowing coaches. The organization held its first national championship that May in Oklahoma City, OK with 43 programs and 687 athletes in attendance. Three years later, the championship included 48 programs and 1102 athletes. Membership to the ACRA is open to all club programs and those varsity programs prohibited from entering either the NCAA or IRA championships. The organization is run by a board elected from and by the member teams. ACRA works to support, recognize, and promote the efforts of the hard working club rowers of the United States of America.
